Australian Government

Park Laws

Kakadu National Park is a Commonwealth Reserve under the Environment Protection and Biodiversity Conservation Act 1999. As a result, the laws in Kakadu differ in some ways from other areas within the Northern Territory. For more information please call the Bowali Visitor Centre on (08) 8938 1120.

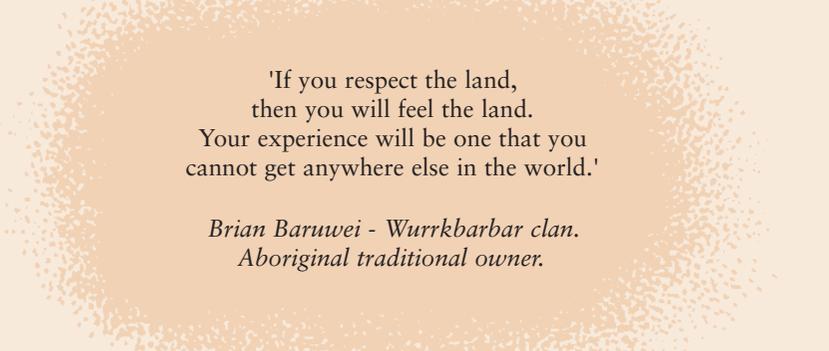

Welcome to Kakadu

The Board of Management and park staff welcome you to Kakadu. On behalf of the Aboriginal traditional owners, we hope you will enjoy learning about culture, land management and caring for country.

Kakadu is a cultural landscape. It was shaped by the spiritual ancestors of Aboriginal people during the Creation Time. These ancestors or ‘first people’ journeyed across the country creating the landforms, plants, animals and Bininj/Munggyu (Aboriginal people). They brought with them laws to live by: ceremony, language, kinship and ecological knowledge. They taught Bininj/Munggyu how to live with the land and look after the country.

The name ‘Kakadu’ comes from an Aboriginal floodplain language called Gagudju which was one of the languages spoken in the north of the park at the beginning of the twentieth century. Although languages such as Gagudju and Limilngan are no longer regularly spoken, descendants of these language groups are still living in Kakadu. Aboriginal languages used in the park today include Kunwinjku from the north-eastern region, Gun-djeihmi from the central region and Jawoyn from the southern region.

Kakadu National Park is a Commonwealth Reserve covering almost 20 000 square kilometres, and includes the traditional lands of a number of Aboriginal clan groups. Kakadu is managed jointly by its Aboriginal traditional owners and the Australia Government Department of Environment and Heritage.

*'If you respect the land,
then you will feel the land.
Your experience will be one that you cannot get anywhere else in the world.'*

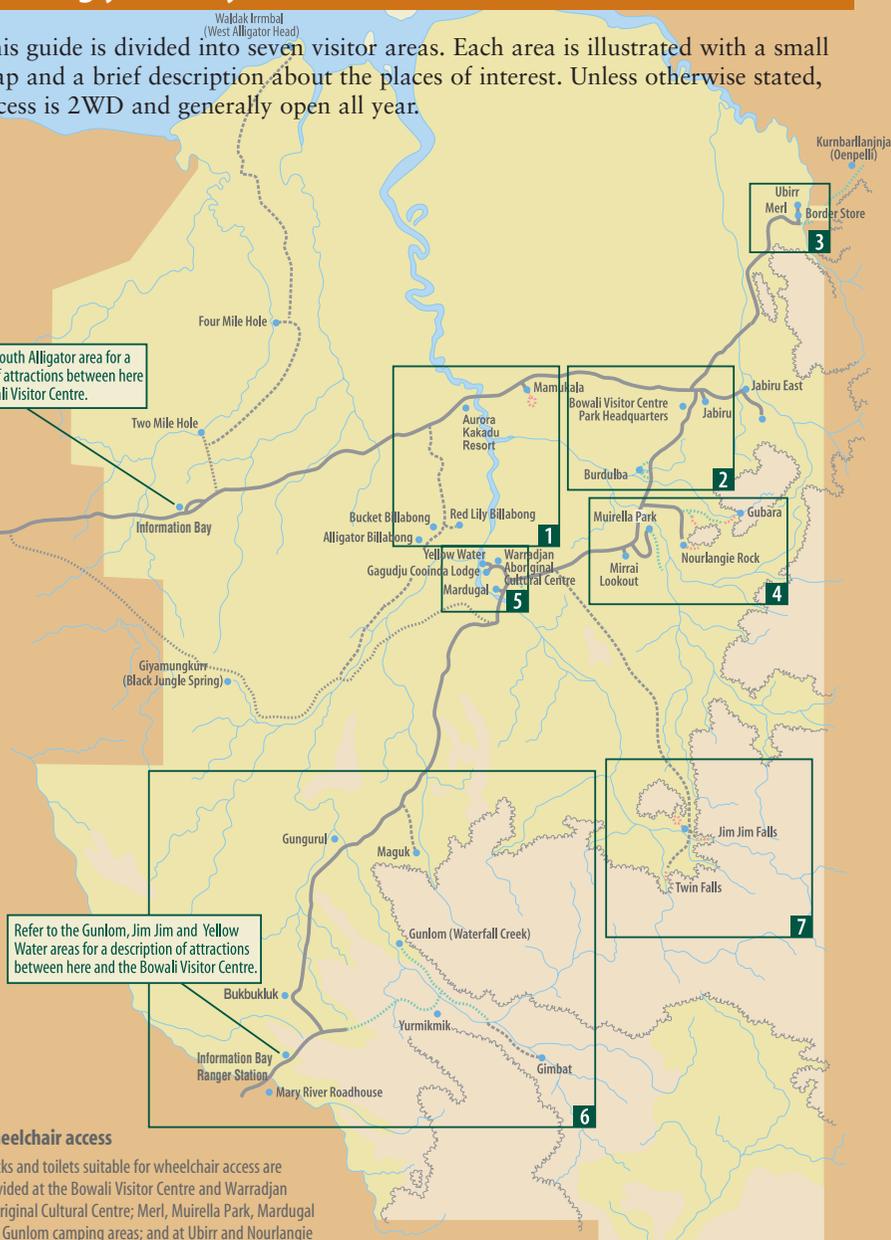

*Brian Baruwei - Wurrkbarbar clan.

Bininj (pronounced Bin-ing) is a Kunwinjku and Gun-djeihmi word, Munggyu (pronounced Moong-gooy) is a Jawoyn word. Both are similar to the English word man and depending on the context can mean man, male, person or Aboriginal people.

Finding your way

This guide is divided into seven visitor areas. Each area is illustrated with a small map and a brief description about the places of interest. Unless otherwise stated, access is 2WD and generally open all year.

Refer to the South Alligator area for a description of attractions between here and the Bowali Visitor Centre.

Wheelchair access

Tracks and toilets suitable for wheelchair access are provided at the Bowali Visitor Centre and Warradjan Aboriginal Cultural Centre; Merl, Muirella Park, Mardugal and Gunlom camping areas; and at Ubirr and Nourlangie art sites. Mamukala and Yellow Water have wheelchair access tracks but no toilet facilities.

Kakadu, a World Heritage Area

Kakadu National Park is one of the few World Heritage Areas that have been listed for both their cultural and natural heritage. The park protects one of the finest and most extensive collections of rock art in the world, a tangible reminder of Aboriginal people's long and continuing association with the area.

Kakadu protects examples of most of Australia's Top End habitats, including the entire catchment of a large tropical river, the South Alligator. From this range of habitats stems a remarkable abundance and variety of plants and animals. Many are rare or not found anywhere else and new species continue to be discovered.

This World Heritage emblem symbolises the interdependence of cultural and natural properties: the central square is a form created by people and the circle represents nature. The two are intimately linked.

You can help care for yourself and Kakadu by following these guidelines:

- Walk only on marked tracks.
- Avoid damaging Aboriginal rock paintings by staying behind the barriers.
- Protect plants and do not use tree branches as fly swats.
- Do not feed or disturb wildlife.
- Light fires only in fireplaces provided.
- Use as little firewood as possible or use fuel stoves.
- Camp only in designated camping areas.
- Drive carefully and keep to the roads and carparks.
- Obey warning signs.

Introduction to Bininj/Munggy (Aboriginal) ways

Kakadu National Park is home to many Aboriginal people. As in most cultures, Bininj/Munggy culture has its own set of social behaviours and customs, which are considered good manners. Please consider these while visiting Kakadu.

- Religion and ceremony are very important parts of Bininj/Munggy life. Show respect by not entering restricted areas such as sacred sites, ceremonial sites or burial grounds.
- Traditionally Bininj/Munggy do not greet each other every time they meet. However, most Bininj/Munggy are used to non-Aboriginal people doing so and may expect a 'hello'.
- Many Bininj/Munggy do not use personal names as freely as non-Aboriginal people do and often address each other by kinship terms.
- Bininj/Munggy appreciate privacy. It is good manners not to enter living areas and not to take photographs of Bininj/Munggy without permission.
- Some Bininj/Munggy find constant eye contact uncomfortable.
- In Bininj/Munggy culture, it is important to pay attention, and to consider your questions carefully.
- It is polite to say 'good bye' when leaving. In this area the Bininj/Munggy word for good bye is boh boh (pronounced bor bor).
- In Bininj/Munggy culture, it is often not appropriate to use the names or display images of deceased people.
- Areas may close at short notice for cultural purposes at the request of traditional owners.

Pronouncing Bininj/Munggy names

Unlike English, the spelling system used to record local Aboriginal languages is very consistent. So once you have learnt the alphabet, it is quite easy to pronounce words by sounding them out.

The Aboriginal Language Park Note details the Gun-djeihmi alphabet. It is available from the Bowali Visitor Centre. In this guide, English approximations for some names are given in brackets.

Kakadu's habitats

Savanna woodlands

Travelling anywhere in Kakadu, you can't help but notice the woodlands which make up nearly eighty percent of the park. Consisting mostly of eucalypts and tall grasses, at first glance they might seem lifeless and monotonous. However, the woodlands support a greater variety of plants and animals than any other habitat in the park.

Manngarre walk, East Alligator Area, dry season.

Monsoon forests

Unlike the expansive woodlands, monsoon forests occur in small, isolated patches. Fruit-eating birds and flying foxes help to link the plants in these isolated pockets of forest together by dispersing pollen and seeds as they move around.

Southern hills and ridges

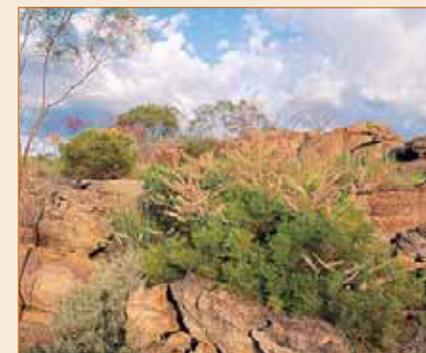

In the south of the park, hills and broken ridge lines are the result of millions of years of erosion. The unusual geology of this area is reflected in the diversity of habitats and the presence of plants and animals that do not occur anywhere else in the world.

Stone country

To the east of the Kakadu Highway is the dominating sandstone escarpment of the Arnhem Land Plateau. It ranges in height from 30 metres to 300 metres. In some areas the escarpment is eroding by up to one metre every thousand years, leaving behind rock shelters and outliers like Ubirr and Nourlangie.

Ngurrungurrudjba (Yellow Water), dry season.

Floodplains and billabongs

Floodplains such as the South Alligator floodplain visible from the Arnhem Highway undergo dramatic seasonal changes. Following wet season rains, a sea of shallow freshwater spreads over the plains for hundreds of square kilometres. As the floodplains start to dry, waterbirds and crocodiles seek refuge in the remaining wet areas such as Yellow Water Billabong.

Tidal flats and coast

Kakadu protects almost 500 square kilometres of coastal and estuarine areas, as well as two islands. Most of these areas are lined with mangrove forests which form an important nursery for many fish including barramundi. Kakadu's wetlands, which include floodplains, billabongs, rivers, coastal and estuarine areas, are recognised internationally as being significant for migratory birds.

The role of fire

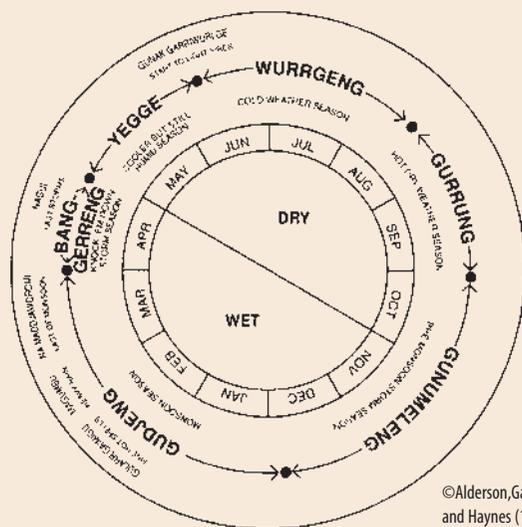

Fire has a major influence on the Australian environment and has shaped many of the plant communities we see today.

Traditional burning

Fire has been an important part of Aboriginal life for thousands of years. It was used to signal others and is still used for cooking, to make hunting easier, to attract animals, to protect foods such as yams and to 'clean the country' before the hot dry weather comes.

This earth, I never damage.
I look after. Fire is nothing, just clean up.
When you burn, new grass coming up.
That means good animal soon,
might be goanna, possum, wallaby.
Burn him off, new grass coming up, new life all over.

*Bill Neidjie - Bunitj clan.

©Alderson, Gangali and Haynes (1979)

Changes to traditional burning

Fires lit by Bininj/Mungguy as they travelled to different parts of the country created a patchwork of burnt and unburnt areas. With the arrival of non-Aboriginal people, the Bininj/Mungguy population decreased. Many people died of disease, others moved off their land to towns and settlements. With fewer people on the land, less burning was carried out, so hot, late dry season wildfires became more common. These hot fires were often large and destructive, changing the distribution of plants and animals.

Burning around pandanus palms.

Planned burning

Since the 1980s, Bininj/Mungguy and park managers have worked together to reduce the number of hot fires at the end of the dry season.

Most burning takes place in the early dry season (May to July) when conditions are relatively cool. These fires are generally of low intensity, and of little risk to humans and most animals. Damp areas, left over from the wet season, help to break up fires and create a patchwork pattern of burnt and unburnt areas.

Although late dry season fires (September to November) are generally avoided, some floodplain burning, often by Bininj/Mungguy hunting goannas and turtles, does occur. Fires are also lit by lightning strikes at this time of the year. Wet season burning is used to reduce the amount of flammable spear grass (Sorghum spp) before the dry season.

Reducing the risk of wildfires

Please help prevent wildfires. Make sure your cigarette butts and matches are out and put them in rubbish bins, not on the ground. Clear the area around your campfire and put it out before you leave.

Fire as part of our environment

Using fire wisely, for the right purposes at the right time, will ensure Australia's unique environment is maintained for present and future generations.

4WD tours are available to the area in the dry season. During the wet season Jim Jim & Twin Falls can be viewed via a scenic flight. For further information on tours please call Jabiru Travel Centre on telephone (08) 8979 2548.

Crocodiles

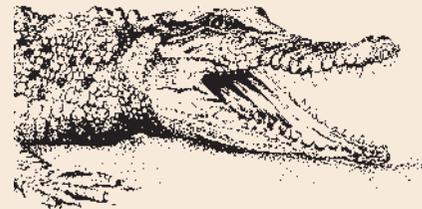

Crocodiles are the world's largest living reptiles. They are also one of the most ancient, having existed unchanged for nearly two hundred million years. There are 26 types of crocodilians in the world. Two species occur in Australia, the freshwater and the estuarine crocodile. Between the 1940s and 1960s, these crocodiles were hunted to near extinction for their skins. By 1971, both species were fully protected. Their numbers have increased allowing protection measures to be relaxed. Crocodile eggs are harvested commercially outside the park, to provide animals for crocodile farms.

Freshwater crocodiles

Freshwater crocodile (Crocodylus johnstoni) is only found in Australia. They live in freshwater rivers, creeks and plunge pools such as Maguk and Gunlom. Freshwater crocodiles are usually shy animals but can become aggressive if disturbed, so do not approach them.

Freshwater crocodile.

Estuarine (saltwater) crocodile.

Estuarine (saltwater) crocodiles

Estuarine crocodile (Crocodylus porosus) is also found in India, South East Asia and Papua New Guinea. They live in freshwater and estuarine areas, such as floodplains, billabongs, rivers and coastal waters.

Estuarine crocodiles are aggressive. They have attacked and killed people in Kakadu. For your safety, please read all estuarine crocodile signs and obey the 'No Swimming' warnings.

Crocodiles, plunge pools and gorge areas

Due to the risk of estuarine crocodiles in the park, the only public place we recommend you swim in is the Jabiru swimming pool.

Some visitors choose to swim at their own risk, in selected natural plunge pools and gorge areas such as Gubara, Maguk, Jim Jim Falls, Gunlom, Jarrangbarnmi (Koolpin Gorge) and in creeks on the plateau above Twin Falls and Gunlom. These areas are surveyed for estuarine crocodiles prior to opening each dry season. There remains some risk that estuarine crocodiles may move into gorges and plunge pools during the dry season.

Please read the crocodile warning signs in each plunge pool and gorge area and consider their information carefully.

Visitor Safety

What to wear

During the heat of the day, you will be most comfortable in loose covering clothing which is cool but protects you from sunburn and insect bites. Use sunscreen and wear a wide brimmed hat and sunglasses. Mosquitoes can carry viruses such as the Ross River virus, so if they are biting, use a repellent.

Preventing dehydration

Limit your activity to the cooler parts of the day (mornings and late afternoons) and drink plenty of water. Most people need between 4 to 8 litres of water per day so start drinking water early (coffee, tea and alcohol don't count!). Remember, if you're feeling thirsty, you're already partially dehydrated.

Dehydration signs and symptoms

Early symptoms include feeling thirsty, excess sweating, headache, dizziness and nausea. If dehydration continues, it can result in seizures, a loss of consciousness and even death.

First aid

- Lie the person down in a cool shaded area.
- Give them water in small quantities at a time (creek water is alright if you have no other water).
- If the person cannot keep the water down, or does not recover quickly, seek medical assistance.
- For further medical assistance and advice please contact the medical centre at Jabiru on 8979 2018.
- Emergency Call Device's [ECD] are available in remote locations throughout the park. Instructions on use are written on the ECD. These are for emergency calls only. See maps for locations.

Flash Flooding

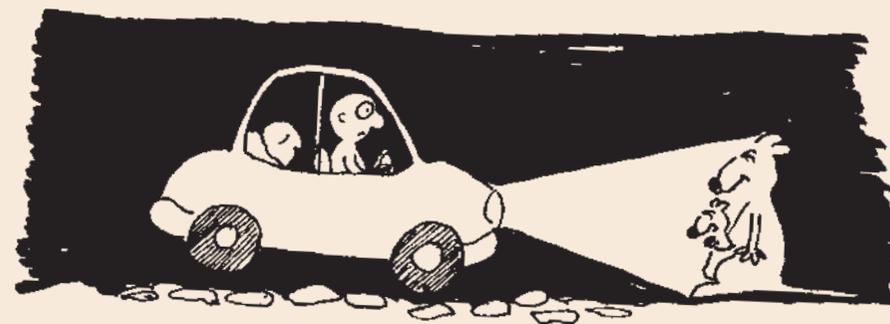

Please be aware of possible sudden rises in the water levels of waterways, which can quickly cut off the return route from the top of waterfalls such as Gunlom and Jim Jim. Fast flowing water contained within a flash flood can be deceptively strong causing strong currents and dangerous swimming conditions.

Driving hints

Top End roads can be hazardous. Plan ahead and allow sufficient time for travel. Here are some other hints to reduce the risk of accident.

Dirt and Gravel Roads: Unsealed roads are often corrugated with soft edges. During the dry season, dust from other vehicles can obscure your vision. During the wet season, unsealed roads become slippery. Drive carefully. If you accidentally drift off the edge, correct your direction carefully and brake evenly.

Check wet season road access: For up-to-date information on road conditions contact the Bowali Visitor Centre on (08) 8938 1120.

Animals: Large feral animals such as horses and buffaloes, and native animals such as wallabies and birds live in Kakadu. Drive slowly, look out for animals on the road, and try to avoid driving at night.

Flooded crossings: Read the signs, look at depth markers and observe how quickly the water is flowing, before deciding whether to cross a flooded crossing. Sometimes it is safer to wait until the water recedes. Remember crocodiles may be present.

Four Wheel Driving (4WD): When using 4WD tracks, put your vehicle into 4WD. This is easier on your car and easier on the track. If you're unfamiliar with your vehicle, follow the instructions to engage 4WD. Many vehicles need their front wheel hubs physically turned to the locked position, before engaging 4WD from the driver's seat.

Fires: Make sure you park your vehicle in cleared areas rather than in flammable long grass. Use vehicle headlights if driving through areas with heavy smoke, and drive slowly.

Road side viewing: Park your vehicle well off the road and use your hazard lights to-alert other drivers that you have stopped. Do not park on bridges or causeways at any time.

Warning: Don't leave valuables in your vehicle-vehicles have been broken into.

Exploring Aboriginal culture

Traditional owners would like you to learn about Aboriginal culture during your visit to Kakadu and neighbouring areas.

Aboriginal rock art sites

Bininj/Munggy and their creation ancestors have painted in rock shelters for thousands of years. Signs at Ubirr, Nourlangie and Nanguluwur explain some of these paintings. The Rock Art Park Note available at the Bowali Visitor Centre explains the main rock art styles found in the area.

Ranger guided walks and talks

During the dry season, rangers provide daily art site talks at Ubirr and Nourlangie. They also provide a number of guided walks and slide shows throughout the park. Check the What's On guide for details.

Warradjan Aboriginal Cultural Centre

Bininj/Munggy have explained aspects of their culture at the Warradjan Aboriginal Cultural Centre.

Aboriginal arts and crafts

Bininj/Munggy artistic expression continues on paper, bark and other materials, often using traditional ochres and brushes. Introduced techniques such as screen printing are used to reproduce detailed designs on fabric. Baskets, dilly bags and woven mats are made from local plant fibres, such as pandanus, and coloured using natural dyes.

Arts and crafts can be viewed or bought at the Warradjan Aboriginal Cultural Centre, Marrawuddi Gallery (Bowali Visitor Centre), and Injalak Arts and Crafts (Kunbarllanjnja, Arnhem Land).

A permit to visit Injalak in Arnhem Land can be arranged through the Northern Land Council in Jabiru, telephone (08) 8979 2410. 4WD tours to Arnhem Land are also available (see page 13 for details).

Katherine region

The Nitmiluk Visitor Centre situated 30 km north-east of Katherine provides information about Jawoyn culture. Aboriginal cultural tours to Manyallaluk Community depart regularly from Katherine. Bookings required, telephone (08) 8975 4727.

Boating and fishing

Boating on Kakadu's waterways can be dangerous due to strong currents, sand bars, submerged logs and crocodiles. For this reason use of non-motorised vessels (canoes) is prohibited. If using a motorised vessel please let someone know where you are going and what time you expect to be back. In tidal areas always carry life jackets, water, oars, flares, torch, tool kit, extra fuel and a satellite phone. Refer to the Northern Territory Marine Act signs for more detailed safety information. Boating is prohibited in certain areas - check at Bowali Visitor Centre for details.

Boat ramps

Concrete boat ramps are located at the South Alligator River near the Arnhem Highway, the East Alligator River, Yellow Water, Mardugal and Jim Jim Billabong. Unsealed boat ramps are located at Waldak Irrmbal and Muirella Park.

Warning: Crocodiles occur near boat ramps.

Beware of Salvinia

Salvinia is a free floating aquatic fern native to South America. It was originally imported as an aquarium plant. It reproduces very rapidly by growing from small fragments. The areas between Yellow Water north to the South Alligator River, and the Magela Creek from Mudginberri to Nankeen Billabongs have been closed to boating as a quarantine measure. If boating near salvinia please help stop this weed from choking Kakadu's wetland areas by checking and removing any salvinia from your boat, trailer and car before moving on.

Fishing (live bait is not permitted)

Recreational fishing, using a line with a single hook or lure, is permitted in waters west of the Kakadu Highway except in the West Alligator River system. To provide refuge areas, fishing is not permitted in waters east of the Kakadu Highway except at the camping areas of Muirella Park (Djarradjin and Sandy Billabongs) and Jim Jim Billabong. Firearms, nets, traps, spear guns, spears and crab pots are not permitted in any Commonwealth Reserve. A landing net may be used to land hooked fish. Contact the Bowali Visitor Centre, telephone (08) 8938 1120 for up-to-date information.

Bushwalking

“Walking is good.
You follow track.....
you sleep,
wake in morning to birds,
maybe kookaburra.
You feel country.”
*Bill Neidjie - Bunitj clan,

If you're well prepared and physically fit, then bushwalking is a great way to experience Kakadu. The Bushwalking in Kakadu booklet provides important information on safe bushwalking. It is available from the Bowali Visitor Centre. To assist in caring for the Park, please stay on the marked tracks.

Day walks

If you'd like to do a half-day or full-day walk, try the Sandstone and River bushwalk (described on page 17), the Barrk bushwalk (page 19), the Yurmikmik walks (page 23) or the Barrk Malam walk (described below).

Barrk Marlam bushwalk (dry season only)

Where: This marked day walk branches off the Jim Jim Falls Plunge Pool track (see page 24).

Features: A very steep, difficult 6 km return walk through the rugged stone country typical of the Arnhem Land Plateau. Allow 4 to 6 hours.

Overnight bushwalking

If you plan to camp overnight on a bushwalk you will need a permit. To obtain a permit, you must submit an application and provide a copy of a topographic map showing your proposed route and camping sites for approval. Permits can be organised through the Permits Officer Kakadu National Park telephone (08) 89381140 or the Bowali Visitor Centre in Kakadu (see page 33). Please allow at least one week for processing. Make sure you read and understand the permit conditions.

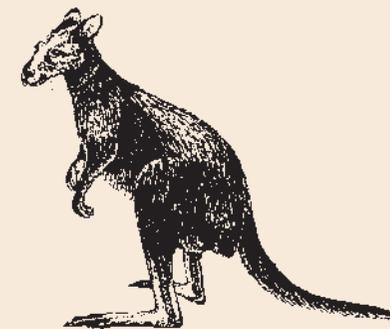

Please note: Good navigational skills are essential. You must stick to the bushwalking route and camping sites approved in your permit.

Viewing the wildlife

Kakadu is one of the few places in Australia where there have been limited, if any, extinctions of plants or animals over the last 200 years. Kakadu is a stronghold for animals such as magpie geese which once occurred throughout eastern and southern Australia. The park also protects the habitats of animals that only occur in the Kakadu/Arnhem Land region such as the black wallaroo (right), chestnut-quilled rock pigeon (directly below) and the white-throated grass wren (bottom).

Black Wallaroo (Female: Macropus bernardus)

Some hints

- The mornings and evenings are good times to see animals such as birds and wallabies. During the hotter times of the day, animals tend to be less active.
- Waterholes along creeklines attract animals, especially small birds. Sit quietly as animals in need of water can frighten easily.
- Use binoculars during the day or a torch at night.
- Look for animals such as lizards, snakes, bandicoots and dingoes crossing the road. Slow down so that you see the wildlife rather than run over it!
- Please don't feed the wildlife. Animals such as dingoes and kites can be dangerous if they become used to people.

Paying for the Park

Conserving Kakadu's World Heritage values and presenting them to the public costs several million dollars each year. The Australian Government provides nearly all of the funds needed, as the requirement for visitor's to pay Park Entry fees was removed in December 2004. The collection of other fees and charges, such as camping fees at major campgrounds, also helps to pay for these important services.

Your Health & Safety

Kakadu National Park is a beautiful place but can be dangerous if you do not look after yourself.

Read and obey all warning signs, notices and safety directions.

Please remember these important points:

Crocodiles

Estuarine crocodiles are dangerous. They have attacked and killed people.

Estuarine crocodiles inhabit most areas of water in Kakadu National Park including freshwater billabongs and creeks as well as rivers and saltwater areas.

In most locations, crocodile warning signs tell you not to enter the water and to keep away from the water's edge.

Obey signs warning of crocodiles.

If you do not see a warning sign you should assume that crocodiles are present. Do not enter the water unless you are sure it is safe to do so. See page 25 for more information about crocodiles.

Cliffs

Walking or standing near cliff edges can lead to serious injury or death, especially when rock surfaces are wet.

Keep well away from all cliff edges.

Driving

Please drive carefully!

See page 27 for more information.

Please take care! Don't risk your life.

For more safety information, please read pages 25, 26, 27 and 30 inside this Visitor Guide. Information is also available from the Bowali Visitor Centre on (08) 8938 1120.
